

ONLY NATURAL Newton-John
 and hubby promote a healthy lifestyle.

OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN

Healthy Harvest

• Seventeen years after receiving a breast cancer diagnosis, Olivia Newton-John credits much of her recovery to healthy living and a love of nature. "Nature is my church," says the four-time Grammy winner, "and I need to get out in it every day." That need has been met in a big way now that Newton-John, 62, has married John Easterling, 59, founder of the Amazon Herb Company. The two travel regularly to the Peruvian rain forest, where, while harvesting ingredients for a line of natural health products, they are helping build 17 schools for indigenous youth. —Frank Yuvancic

CLORIS LEACHMAN

• "People keep asking me what I'm going to do next. I was thinking of getting pregnant or cloning myself, or both."

— The Oscar winner, 83, after appearing on Dancing With the Stars, wrapping three feature films, writing her autobiography, performing her one-woman show in her hometown of Des Moines, and launching a clothing line

MONTEL WILLIAMS Big Talk

• When asked about a career in politics, Montel Williams, 53, has an announcement: "I will eventually run. Senator, congressman, governor—I'm not afraid of any position, including president of the United States."

In the meantime the Emmy-winning talk show host—who credits an antioxidant supplement with helping him combat symptoms of multiple sclerosis—will keep talking, now on his new Air America radio show, Montel Across America. —Meg Grant

I'm not afraid of any elected position," says future candidate Montel Williams.